LIFTING LIQUOR BAN ASSURED, BANKERS HEAR

Facing Disaster If Lid Is Clamped, Jubilant Over New Prospects.

MADE HEAVY LOANS

$150,000,000 Invested in Bonded Warehouses Will Be Liquidated.

Word has reached New York that efforts of bankers to obtain the lifting within a short time of the liquor ban have proved successful. President Wilson is said to have agreed to do this in order to save the banks approximately $150,000,000, which amount they loaned to wholesalers to put the liquors in bonded warehouses, holding warehouse certificates as collateral.

One New York financier has been in the capital for the past two weeks, vainly trying to ascertain just what the President would do in this matter. He admitted that he was frantically trying to find out, inasmuch as his fortune would be practically wiped out unless a favorable turn came. This man has gone back to New York, confidently satisfied that action will be taken.

Needless to say, there is jubilation among bankers, wholesalers, and those who take advantage of the final opportunity of "laying in" a large supply of liquor. About twenty banks are said to face ruin unless the ban is lifted.

LOVE BEATEN IN CLASH WITH FATHER'S INTELLECT

He Frustrates Elopement Plans of Richmond, Va., Couple Who Came to Capital To Be Wed.

Young love was forced to dip its colors yesterday afternoon when the father of Rosa Chalkley, Richmond, Va., outwitted the carefully laid elopement plans of Melton E. Seay, of the same city.

The young couple eloped to Washington yesterday. The sky was bright, birds singing and all was right. They figured to have the knot tied real quick and then to hurry back home and surprise their parents.

But the chief of police at Richmond had already been requested by Rosa's father to telegraph the police here to keep the couple from obtaining the license. It was explained that Rosa lacked a whole year of the age required in the District.

So bright and early this morning Policeman Livingston, of No. 2, visited Col. William A. Kroll at Cupid's Bower, District Supreme Court, and asked him to deny young Melton and Rosa a license.

HANDS OFF!

Substitute Headgear Spurned By Lawyer, Victim of Exchange.

An apparent theft was committed under the eyes of Judge McMahon in police court yesterday. When Attorney John A. Moss was preparing to leave the court room he discovered that some one had taken his fawn colored soft and wide brimmed $12 hat and left instead a soiled black derby of ancient vintage.

"This is larceny in court," the lawyer angrily exclaimed. "There can be no case of mistaken identity as my hat was soft and light, while this thing (gazing indignantly at the hat), is black, stiff, old and soiled."

He left the court room bareheaded, declining to even touch the ancient derby.

N. Y. Governor's Appeal Stops Milkmen Strike

New York, Nov. 3.—That New York City's milk supply was not cut off today was due to a last minute decision of 5,000 union drivers to accept a compromise submitted in behalf of their employers instead of quitting work.

Gov. Smith appealed to the men just before the strike vote was taken and was successful in swaying the sentiment, which was strongly in favor of a walkout, to a plan whereby the men will work on a one year contract which provides for a six-day week, increased wages and commissions and improved working conditions.

They will receive $3 a week wages and 2 per cent commission on collections.

It was not until some hours later that the eloping couple actually arrived but when they did and presented their application, Col. Kroll remembered they were the pair he had been requested to frustrate. Seay gave his age as 21 and his prospective bride's as 18.

Col. Kroll immediately summoned "Charles," who does the errands about the office, who, in turn brought a detective in from one of the courts.

Without any untoward scene the pair meekly permitted the plain clothes man to accompany them to police headquarters, where they were placed under the mothering wing of the Woman's Bureau.

The sky was still bright, with the birds chirping but the pair were too consumed by their disappointment to notice it now as they were led to Union Station and put on a train back to their homes in Richmond.

WOMAN'S GARB MAY GIVE CLUE

Parents Ask Police to Seek Owner of Clothes Worn By Flushing Youth.

Flushing, L. I., Nov. 3.—"The ownership of those women's garments are the key to the mystery of his death."

This statement was made by William Lemke, father of John W. Lemke, the 21-year-old boy of College Point, whose death on his boat some two weeks ago has caused no end of suicide and murder theories to account for the peculiar facts surrounding his decease.

The description of the woman's apparel found on the body, as Dr. Norris and the police noted it, is as follows:

Gingham blue and white checked house dress; corset cover held together with safety pin and rose-colored baby ribbon running through lace; a woman's undershirt having shoulder straps; one pair of straight front corsets laced in back; one pair of ladies' pink bloomers, with ruffle; one pair of high black silk stockings fastened to the corset by corset garters; a pair of high-laced shoes which were not laced, black leather with high French heels and olive-colored tops. There was also a sash around the body a yard in length with a safety pin attached, multi-colored green, red and blue in long stripes.

President Renews Arbitration Offer; Miners Take Heed

Signs at Headquarters in Indianapolis That Pressure Will Have Effect—Gompers And Stone Talk With Lewis—Believed To Have Urged Acceptance of Mediation.

Indianapolis, Nov. 3.—While John L. Lewis, acting head of the United Mine Workers of America, was standing firm tonight, there were reports that he would yield through pressure and persuasion.

It was expected that within a few days, if an agreement has not been reached that will permit the men to return to work, pressure would come not only from the government and the public, but from the miners in the field as well.

15 Mines Reopen.

Already reports are beginning to filter in to Indianapolis that miners in some parts of the country were growing restive and in a few places they had actually returned to work.

Fifteen mines in the northern fields of West Virginia were reported last night to have reopened following the announcement that President Wilson's offer to name a mediation committee remained open.

From Colorado came news that a few men had returned to work and that others had asked the government to furnish protection that they, too, might go back. A dispatch from Lexington, Ky., said all the mines in the eastern part of the country were being worked.

A more hopeful view of the situation was expressed by the government.
